[London, Monday 2 June 2025] Audiomovers, the driving force behind Abbey Road's innovation offer, and pioneers of audio collaboration technologies, proudly announces the appointment of the legendary Nile Rodgers as Chief Collaborator and Chair of its Board of Advisors.

Iconic producer, Nile Rodgers, who is a Rock & Roll Hall of Fame inductee, Songwriters Hall of Fame inductee and a multiple Grammy Award winning songwriter, composer, producer, arranger and guitarist, now lends his creative vision to Audiomovers - who have enabled seamless remote music creation for top artists like Taylor Swift, J. Cole, Beyonce and Burna Boy, and have powered more than 3 million collaborative sessions to date.

Nile Rodgers brings a deeply personal philosophy of collaboration to his new role. He added: "Creativity is born in connection and collaboration - in those subtle, powerful moments where ideas collide, vulnerability is shared, and innovation emerges from the unexpected. No one enables that better than Audiomovers. They saved the music industry during the pandemic and quickly established themselves as the go-to for global collaboration; now they are transforming what's possible for creators everywhere. This opportunity speaks to everything I care about in music and creativity - I knew I had to be part of it. Together, we're going to elevate how artists, producers, and composers create together - and push the future of music forward."

Dom Dronksa, General Manager at Audiomovers says of the appointment: "Audiomovers continues Abbey Road's legacy of game-changing audio innovation - challenging industry norms and setting the standard for how creators collaborate globally. But we're not stopping there. Now, we're pushing the possibilities of what comes next: giving creators new, seamless ways to move, manage and connect audio at every stage of their creative process. And making sure that nothing stands in the way of bold ideas being made real. The music industry runs on creative exchange, and nobody embodies this spirit better than Nile Rodgers. He personifies collaboration, innovation and creativity. There's simply no one better to help us imagine and shape the future of how music is made."

Rodgers will lead a group of advisors drawn from top-tier artists and technologists, and his involvement signals Audiomovers' commitment to the next era of artist-led creativity, aiming to break down technological barriers and redefine how music is made. This new chapter will see Audiomovers expand its ecosystem beyond collaboration, boldly reimagining seamless tools for managing, moving and creating audio - wherever the creative need takes them. With Rodgers at the helm of its Advisory Board, Audiomovers is doubling down on its mission to empower creators everywhere, transforming not just how music is made - but how it's shared, experienced, and connected across the world.

In 2001 in the wake of 9/11 Nile Co-founded the We Are Family Foundation (WAFF) at first to bring everyone together following the tragedy to start the healing process. WAFF is focused on empowering young people globally through its acclaimed youth leadership and mentoring program, Three Dot Dash; Youth To The Front Fund, designed to support youth at the forefront of fighting systemic racism, inequality and injustice; and Youth To The Table, bringing youth voices to decision making tables that are shaping humanity's future.
